Stow-a-Ways on a Fatal Flight...

Here is a story as related to me from Ted. I'd let him tell it:

%had a Giant Stik in my shop up north unused for about a year and thought I would check it out. There was a little chewing on the leading edge of the wing from mice but once I put it together, it started right up, eh. So I flew it and was in the process of trimming it out when it dipped to the right. I re-trimmed it and it dipped to the left a couple times. Then for no reason at all, the right wing dipped and the plane headed straight for the ground. There was nothing I could do to recover it, eh. When I got to the scattered wreckage, there was mouse fur and nesting material coming out of the wing along with the bodies of two dead miceo casualties of the crash. Those little guys must have been running back and forth inside the wings.+ 🍀

And the Good News is...

We have all been concerned and offering prayers for Kenny, who has been experiencing some serious health issues. So after surgery for two splints and a short spell in rehab, we are happy to learn that he is home looking healthier and stronger than we have seen in a long time. His spirits are good, and there is even a report that he has been out and about in his golf cart picking up trash.

Old Time Photo...

A friend sent me this rare old photograph of a popular vaudevillian and his plane of which I have no clue what it is.

Anyone care to take a guess who the pilot and passenger are and the type of plane?

Please give a moment of silence for Art's bi-plane that prematurely returned to terra firma behind Kenny's shop on December 26th. Art said it was in pieces when he originally got it so it is only fitting that it should go out in the same manner. Cause of the crash is under investigation.
